A taxing year ahead: Lobby group

Canadians will pay more taxes in 2011 ◐ Corporate tax rate to drop ◐ 'Everybody loses,' says advocate

For a year of few or no tax changes, Canadians will still be paying quite a bit more to governments and public agencies starting Jan. 1.

Except businesses, which will be popping champagne corks in the new year thanks to a generous, 1.5 percentage point cut to their tax rate that will save the corporate sector about $1.65 billion.

For working Canadians, however, 2011 will go down as the year they saw their net pay stubs shrink, in some cases by significant amounts.

"Everybody loses, but some people are bigger losers than others this year," says Derek Fildebrandt, national research director with the Canadian Taxpayers Federation.

"It's not a direct increase to actual income taxes, but the way it works out, we are going to be paying more from our paycheques towards the government."

All workers will be paying higher premiums for employment insurance and the Canada Pension Plan, adding up to $76 more on anyone earning greater than $44,200.

Will be felt more in Ontario

- On average, a family with one earner and an income of $45,000 will pay about $184 more in taxes next year. A family with an income of $100,000 will pay $437 more.
- In Ontario, those same families will wind up paying $390 and $1,077 more respectively, according to the CTF.

City chef receives Order of Canada

A Toronto celebrity chef, two athletes, a revered television actor and a prominent radio broadcaster were granted one of Canada's highest civilian honours on Thursday when they were named to the Order of Canada.

Gov. Gen. David Johnston announced 54 new recipients of the order.

Honourees included Toronto-based chef Jamie Kennedy, a prominent leader in the city's culinary scene who has opened multiple successful restaurants. He was named a member of the order — the lowest rank — for his promotion of local, organically grown food.

Also recognized were former NHL player Trevor Linden, tennis champion Daniel Nestor, veteran actor Eric Peterson and longtime CBC broadcaster Shelagh Rogers.

$50M prize still up for grabs

Lottery players have a chance to ring in the new year with a real bang — once again there's a $50-million top prize in Friday night's Lotto Max draw.

No one had the winning numbers Christmas Eve, so the prize will be up for grabs again New Year's Eve.

As well, because the jackpot is capped at $50 million, there will be 18 Maxmillions prizes of $1 million each — up from 10 last week.

Sarah Kiriliuk of Ontario Lottery and Gaming says sales have been a little slower for this week's draw.

She says many people were buying tickets as Christmas presents and stocking stuffers last week. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Michigan. Landfill

▶ Toronto-Danforth Coun. Paula Fletcher helps close the last truck to Michigan on Thursday as Toronto sends its final load, 34.2 tonnes of trash, from the Commissioner Street transfer station to the Carleton Farms Landfill in Michigan.

STEVE RUSSELL/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Toronto trash makes last voyage south

In the future, Toronto will send its trash to Ontario's Green Lane landfill, near London. This will also enable drivers to do two trips a day rather than the single trip required for the Michigan site. Toronto was sending 142 truckloads of garbage a day to Michigan in 2003, a number that was reduced to 60 by this year. The city says Green Lane will be able to handle Toronto's trash for 17 to 28 years, depending on the success of recycling programs.

plastic bag fee?

Mayor has said he was irked retailers received profits from fee, decided how they would be spent No mention of when matter may come before council

Mayor Rob Ford now says he wants to scrap the five-cent plastic bag fee. His opinion may not matter.

Even if Ford succeeds in persuading city council to eliminate the bylaw that makes the fee mandatory, some retailers will simply continue charging shoppers for bags, says Coun. Denzil Minnan-Wong, a Ford ally. Loblaws would be one of them, says a spokesperson for World Wildlife Fund Canada, which receives money from the proceeds of Loblaws' fee.

The company and its competitors did not respond to requests for comment Thursday. A senior official at the industry group that represents Canada's major grocery store chains said Ford's Wednesday pronouncement on the bag fee had caught the companies unprepared: They believed they had been assured by the mayor's office in early December that Ford would not try to eliminate the fee.

"From our perspective, this is surprising. It seems there's been a change of heart," said Allen Langdon, vice-president for environmental issues at the Canadian Council of Grocery Distributors.

Ford told the Toronto Sun in early December that he had not decided whether to attempt to scrap the fee or to alter it so that the city, rather than retailers, kept the money. He told the National Post Wednesday that holiday-season conversations with shoppers who "can't stand" the fee have convinced him it should be abolished.

The Toronto Environmental Alliance and World Wildlife Fund Canada said the fee should be preserved. Coun. Glenn De Baeremaeker, an environmentalist, said its elimination would be "idiotic." And while Langdon said his group would not issue an opinion until more details emerged, he said its members considered the fee a success.

Several major retailers, Loblaws included, extended the fee across Canada even though they weren't required to do so.

Ford's spokesperson did not respond to a request for comment.

Former president of Israel convicted of rape

HEIDI LEVINE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Former President Moshe Katsav

Former President Moshe Katsav was convicted Thursday of raping an employee when he was a Cabinet minister, the most serious criminal charges ever brought against a high-ranking official in Israel and a case that shocked the nation.

Katsav, 65, faces from four to 16 years in prison for the crimes, which included two counts of raping an employee in 1998 when he was tourism minister and lesser counts of indecent acts and sexual harassment involving two other women who worked for him when he held the largely ceremonial office of president from 2000-2007.

It was a stunning fall from grace for a man who rose from poverty to the highest levels of power. He became a model of success for Sephardic Jews — those of Middle Eastern origin — who for decades were an ethnic underclass in society.

The conviction of a former president on rape charges — virtually unheard of in a modern Westernized country — was another victory in a decades-long struggle by women's rights groups to chip away at a macho culture that permitted Israel's early political and military leaders to get away with great liberties. Katsav has denied the rape charges, claiming he was a victim of a political witch hunt and suggesting he was targeted because he is Sephardic. Katsav was born in Iran and immigrated to Israel as a child.

"We will continue to walk with our heads high and all the nation ... with God's help, will know that (my) father, the eighth president of the state of Israel, is innocent."
KATSAV'S SON BOAZ

According to the indictment, Katsav forced one woman to the floor of his office at the Tourism Ministry in 1998 and raped her. A second time that year, he summoned her to a Jerusalem hotel to go over paperwork and raped her on the bed in his room. The indictment alleged that Katsav tried to calm his victim by saying: "Relax, you'll enjoy it." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Counterterrorism rings in new year

High security lurks in Times Square on New Year's Eve

It's the biggest public party in the United States. Nearly a million revellers will cram into the streets of New York's Times Square to watch the ball drop on New Year's Eve.

It's also remarkably crime-free, safe and orderly. In the past decade, there have been few arrests and virtually no major problems funneling people in and out of the confetti-filled streets to ring in the New Year.

That's due mostly to what the partygoers don't notice: Throngs of police and counterterrorism officers blanketing the area, working from a security plan specifically tailored for the event.

Since 9/11, there have been at least six foiled plots against the city.

The department has answered with ever-developing tools, like the network of private and police cameras called the Lower and Midtown Manhattan Security initiatives. The department recently added 500 cameras to the subway stops at Times Square, Grand Central Terminal and Penn Station.

The cameras are managed at a command centre in lower Manhattan, where a single high-bandwidth fiber optic network connects the cameras to police. It will be used New Year's Eve to track any suspicious activity. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two years for Nazi sign theft

A Swedish man was sentenced Thursday to two years and eight months in prison for instigating the theft a year ago of the notorious "Arbeit Macht Frei" ("Work Sets You Free") sign from the former Auschwitz death camp.

A judge at a regional court in the southern Polish city of Krakow approved a settlement that Anders Hogstrom, 35, had reached with prosecutors, court spokesman Rafal Lisak said.

Hogstrom had confessed to involvement in the December 2009 theft and was convicted of instigating it.

Montreal homicides up in 2010

Montreal homicide figures jumped in 2010 but police insist the numbers are in line with annual averages for a city of its size.

Police reported 37 homicides in the city this year as of Thursday, compared with 31 last year.

In Toronto, a police spokesman said there have been 60 homicides in Canada's largest city as of Thursday, just short of the 62 that were reported in 2009.

Cmdr. Clement Rose of the Montreal police said recent years were relatively quiet because of calm among organized crime groups and street gangs.

IT'S A GIRL

First great-grandchild for the Queen

Buckingham Palace says the Queen has become a great-grandmother.

Montreal-born Autumn Phillips, wife of the Queen's grandson, Peter Phillips, has given birth to a baby girl.

The baby is the Queen's first great-grandchild and is 12th in line to the throne.

A statement issued by the palace says Autumn Phillips gave birth at Gloucestershire Royal Hospital on Wednesday.

Peter Phillips, the son of Princess Anne, is the Queen's oldest grandchild. He married Autumn Kelly in May 2008 at Windsor Castle.

Kelly grew up far from the royal spotlight.

The 32-year-old was born in Montreal to a retired electricity company executive and former hairdresser who divorced when she and her twin brother were eight.

She met Peter Phillips in 2003 while they were both attending the Montreal Grand Prix and reportedly dated him for six weeks before realizing he was part of the Royal Family.

Cigarette pack images will be harder to inhale

▶ Health Minister Leona Aglukkaq walks past a new cigarette packaging image of lung cancer victim Barb Tarbox during a news conference in Ottawa on Thursday.

Details of a national quit line still need to be worked out before launch

New more explicit graphics for cigarette package labels in Canada would cover 75 per cent of the front and back of packages and rotate through a series of 16 designs that also include a national telephone quit line.

Health Minister Leona Aglukkaq unveiled four of the designs on Thursday, including one of anti-smoking activist Barb Tarbox, who died of lung cancer in 2003 at the age of 42.

The government has spent almost $4 million to develop the new health warnings.

Aglukkaq has been under fire since September when she abruptly postponed introduction of the updated warnings about the dangers of smoking.

Critics accused her of backing down in the face of stiff opposition by cigarette manufacturers.

The end of web users' free reign?

Media faced with question of whether people will pay for content

The web may seem like the land of something for nothing. Free video. Free news. Even free tools such as word processing.

But almost two-thirds of adult Internet users in the U.S. have paid for access to at least one of these intangible items online, according to a new survey from the Pew Internet and American Life Project.

As people shift their attention to the Internet from more traditional ways of enjoying media, the companies that provide everything from movies to mystery novels want to make sure they can still get paid for what they do. The big TV networks want viewers to pay for full access to episodes of their favourite shows, and newspaper companies want readers to pay for news. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Paying the cost

The new figures from Pew suggest paying for content online is at least not a completely foreign idea for most people.

- About a third of respondents said they have paid for digital music. Same for software.
- Behind that came mobile apps for cellphones or tablet computers at 21 per cent.
- Next came digital games at 19 per cent, then newspaper, magazine or journal articles at 18 per cent.

Oligarch's sentence incites outrage

Jailed oil tycoon Mikhail Khodorkovsky was sentenced to six more years in prison Thursday following a trial seen as payback for his defiance of Vladimir Putin and as a test of the rule of law in Russia.

The ruling drew immediate condemnation from the U.S. and European governments, who called it evidence of the use of Russia's judicial system for political ends.

Canada's foreign minister, Lawrence Cannon, said earlier this week that Khodorkovsky's second conviction was a "worrying signal" about the rule of law in Russia.

Defence lawyers argued that Putin was behind the sentence, which matched what prosecutors had demanded for Khodorkovsky when they accused him of stealing oil from his own company and laundering the proceeds.

"You cannot count on the courts to protect you from government officials in Russia," Khodorkovsky said in a statement. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

5 MINUTES WITH: CANDICE & ALISON

Hosting a New Year's Eve shindig? It Girl event planners Candice Chan and Alison Slight reveal how the professionals pull it off.

Many pride themselves on being excellent hosts, so what separates the amateurs from the pros?

Candice: It's how often they do the events, the size, the type, the diversity. Experience is what gives them the ability to react quickly to something that might happen and to keep calm in front of clients.

Alison: It's also the ability to multi-task and plan ahead because there's a difference between having 20 people over to your house in a controlled environment, and an event where there might be elements that are difficult to control.

What sorts of elements?

A: For example, if you have too many people show up it's about managing them with grace, because nobody likes the embarrassment of being turned away at the door. So it's about trying to accommodate them the best way possible, offering them a drink, treating them like a guest, and inevitably making space for them.

You've planned high-profile events in Toronto, Dubai, Thailand. Is it as glamorous as it seems or is it just work?

Both: (Laughing) It's work.

C: There are glamorous sides. There's the wine and food tastings, working with talent, like Kanye West, Elton John, Coco Rocha, which is incredible. But there's also a very unglamorous side: Being onsite at 8 a.m., then packing up after the last person leaves, which can take another two hours. There's also a lot of heavy lifting in high heels.

What tips would you give to people planning a party tonight?

A: The fundamental thing every party must have is enough food and alcohol. You want to make sure that everybody's satiated and having a good time. Another really important element is great music. It's knowing your crowd, what's going to let them enjoy the evening and catering to them.

Many hosts don't end up having fun because they spent the party running around like crazy.

C: They need to relax! (Laughs) As a host, you're inviting your guests over and your guests are here to see you. Throw the dishes in the back of the house and deal with them later. Don't try to clean them while your guests are still here. And if you need help, hire help if you can.

Dangerous year for media

Worth mentioning

A Canadian group reports 87 journalists were killed worldwide in 2010 — with Pakistan, Mexico and Honduras being the most dangerous places to work.

Canadian Journalists for Free Expression came up with the number of 87 in its year-end tally, while other media advocacy groups reported different totals.

Paris-based Reporters Without Borders said 57 journalists were killed worldwide in 2010, while the New York-based Committee to Protect Journalists has posted a tally of 44 on its website.

A spokeswoman for the Canadian group said the discrepancy is because the groups used different methodology to decide which deaths to include in their counts. Julie Payne said Canadian Journalists for Free Expression tried to be more inclusive and counted some deaths that may not have been officially confirmed as a journalist being specifically targeted.

All three groups agreed that Pakistan was the most dangerous place to work.

The Canadian group said this year's total is a decrease from the 101 journalists killed in 2009. But it points out that figure included the massacre of 32 journalists in the Philippines — the most journalists ever killed in one day. THE CANADIAN PRESS

War on words

We asked: What's your New Year's resolution?

@HogTownHarry: my New Year's resolution is to revoke the voting franchise for residents of Toronto's suburbs.

@JTerr88: I resolve ... not to make any resolutions and just live!

My New Year's resolution will be to start a blog about my spiritual quest for truth. PATRICIA TOMASI

Metro Minute with New Year's Eve

After a thoroughly enjoyable year tracking the city's gems, our idea of New Year's Eve heaven involves a chilled bottle of bubbly, a space heater and stacks of crappy movies. But we also remember when our entire outlook for the upcoming year hinged upon the overpriced, overhyped expectations of what party we had chosen to attend.

However, if ethics prevent you from spending more than $100 to walk through the doors of a club, consider free alternatives. A good bet: Souz Dal's Soul Groove Inceptions (636 College St.) for a chilled out dance party. Or there's always the standard heiny-freezing concert lineup at Nathan Phillips Square.

Also free: Your TTC ride home.

▶ Leighton Meester stars in Country Strong, which opens in theatres next Friday.

Gossip Girl's Meester goes country

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LOS ANGELES

Leighton Meester's been enjoying the high fashions and catty one-liners of Gossip Girl, now in its fourth season. But with her recently announced intentions to leave the show when her contract is up, the 24-year-old actress and singer is busy cultivating a 2011 film roster — starting with Country Strong, featuring Meester as an upstart country singer nipping at the heels of a troubled, fresh-out-of-rehab superstar (Gwyneth Paltrow).

Your character, Chiles Stanton, is the butt of a lot of jokes in the movie.
That's something that I really loved about her. She means well, and she isn't trying to hurt anybody, and she's just trying to be somebody. I think she's sassy and she's sweet and she has a lot of good qualities, but a lot of her insecurities allow for other people to walk all over her a bit. And she's very naïve, which is not a part of my personality, or at least not as much as I'd like it to be.

With Chiles being an up-and-comer, audiences might assume she's going to do some backstabbing.
I think you might assume that, especially with this sort of theme, like All About Eve, which I think is an interesting dynamic, showing two women in this industry and how competitive and difficult it can be. I think it's silly and sort of sad that people do that. But I mean, obviously there is a threat between these two characters, and rightfully so. But it's just like being on set with Gwyneth. I'm never trying to be anything but just do well on my own. And she makes everyone better.

How much longer do you see Gossip Girl going?
We're on contract for about six years, and we're on our fourth year. And I'd love it to last as long as it's good. The best part about it is they understand the schedule, so that they can let us off to do things. I mean, here I am doing this and not working in New York.

How did you handle shooting "Country Strong" and Gossip Girl at the same time?
I didn't really think about it at the time. I had a lot of coffee. But you know, I just really wanted to do this movie. That's what I had in my heart. Every time I'd be on a plane in between, I'd be thinking, How am I doing this? What am I doing? And then (director) Shana (Feste) would just make it all better.

After singing some country tunes for the movie, is it something you'd consider your next album?
You know, it definitely has inspired me in the way I write music and the way I play music and appreciate it. Doing this movie was a wonderful introduction and made me fall in love with that type of music, but I don't necessarily know, you know? Actually, since the movie, it's really inspired me to kind of go in a different direction. So between country and pop, I kind of go through the middle.

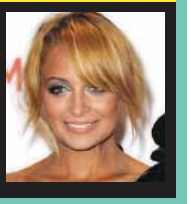
News in brief



Nicole Richie is no longer on probation for a 2006 drunken-driving case.

A spokeswoman for the reality star-turned-fashion designer says a judge ended Richie's probation Wednesday after receiving proof that the 29-year-old had satisfied its terms.

Publicist Nicole Perna says Richie was to remain on probation until February, but the judge agreed to end probation early because Richie completed its requirements, including attending an 18-month alcohol-education program.

CURL UP WITH A MOVIE FOR NEW YEAR'S

In Focus

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

December 31 is one of the busiest nights of the year in bars and restaurants — which is precisely why I like to stay home. I don't enjoy the crowds or the inevitable awkward midnight kissing that goes along with New Year's Eve. But just because I don't like to whoop it up in public doesn't mean I don't celebrate. I prefer to staycation, curling up with the P.M.C. (the Preferred Movie Companion), a bottle of something sparkly and a New Year's Eve themed movie.

For a romantic end-of-the-year mood I usually reach for The Apartment and watch Shirley MacLaine and Jack Lemmon fall in love at their office New Year's Eve party. Or I watch Deborah Kerr and Cary Grant sneak a kiss on December 31, then make a deal to meet six months later on top of the Empire State Building in the soapy An Affair to Remember. But maybe the best mushy NYE scene comes from When Harry Met Sally. On New Year's Eve (when else?) Harry says to Sally (who else would he say this to?), "I came here tonight because when you realize you want to spend the rest of your life with somebody, you want the rest of your life to start as soon as possible."

For Harry New Year's Eve was the beginning of the rest of his life but for the ill fated passengers on the Poseidon it was just the opposite. We've all had disastrous end of the year parties but none match one of my other favourites, The Poseidon Adventure. Right in the middle of their on-board New Year's party a wild wave knocks the ship for a loop, sending ten passengers on a watery New Year's trek to safety.

"I know it was you Fredo. You broke my heart."

MICHAEL CORLEONE TO HIS BROTHER FREDO, IN THE GODFATHER, PART 2. ONE OF THE MOST FAMOUS NEW YEAR'S MOVIE LINES.

There are dozens of movies filed under Auld Lang Syne in my collection like 200 Cigarettes — set during New Year's Eve, 1981 — and Sleepless in Seattle where Tom Hanks has an imaginary conversation with his late wife. '"Here's to us," he says, while we wipe a tear or two.

There's others like Sunset Blvd. and Bridget Jones's Diary but perhaps the greatest New Year's Eve scene happens in The Godfather, Part 2. At a New Year's Eve party in Havana, at the stroke of midnight, Michael Corleone grabs his brother Fredo, gives him a kiss, and says, "I know it was you Fredo. You broke my heart." Terrified, Fredo disappears, which gives new meaning to "may old acquaintance be forgot…"

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Here are some predictions for the next year: CD sales will continue to spiral downward as more people get with the digital program via their smart phones, tablets and the new in-dash Internet devices in their cars.

Pop artists will dominate the album charts because their fans will be the only ones buying CDs in any significant numbers. Soon, the CD sales charts will become irrelevant as labels, artists and managers will increasingly demand different metrics for measuring success like downloads (legal and otherwise), Facebook sharing, music streams, YouTube views, tweets and MySpace plays.

Speaking of which, News Corp. will unload MySpace. I just hope that the new owners will see its value in spreading the word on music.

Look for several companies (Google, Spotify or perhaps even iTunes) to start offering subscription-based all-you-can-eat streaming services from the cloud.

These services won't be profitable right away, but once they become available, adoption rate will pick up as people recognize the convenience they offer.

In a few years, the idea of having to pre-load a music player with music before we leave the house will seem primitive. Our music will follow us wherever we go on every device we want to use.

"In a few years, the idea of having to pre-load a music player with music before we leave the house will seem primitive."

This isn't to say that we won't still want to buy songs to keep. We'll still use iTunes, HMV Digital and all the other online stores, but watch for a rise in apps that will allow us to continuously interact with individual bands. App stores will become the new record stores.

However, music piracy will remain unstoppable. After more than 10 years of this game of Whack-a-Mole, the music industry must be slowly realizing that all they can't stamp out illegal file-sharing.

The music video will continue to find new life online, thanks to the developing HTML5 protocol — have you seen the Arcade Fire's Wilderness Downtown video? — and portals like YouTube and Vevo and apps that offer customized delivery.

Meanwhile, the vinyl renaissance will peak and live on as a viable niche market — for a few years, anyway.

The concert industry will continue to readjust to the new economics of the music industry. I mean, how many $1,000 VIP packages can you sell? Promoters and managers will have to work together better.

One wish: let's stop throwing around the world "indie." It's become obsolete. Let's just call it "new music." Deal?

A taste of the eccentric family

Raising Hope offers a dose of off-the-wall humour

IAN JOHNSTON
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Giving with a baby on his series Raising Hope is a breeze. It's octogenarian Oscar winner Cloris Leachman who can be a handful.

"I asked her to stop licking me and she said no to that," laughs Garcia, who cast Leachman as the dotty great-grandmother in the new comedy.

"I've asked her to stop jumping on top of me. She said no to that. There are a lot of things that I've asked her to do that she says no."

Raising Hope is Garcia's latest foray into eccentric family sitcoms following his hit My Name Is Earl. The premise follows 20-year-old loser Jimmy (Lucas Neff) who — after a one-night stand with a serial killer — finds himself a father.

the mother, unfortunately, is executed for her crimes, leaving Jimmy with the newborn. Helping him out is an extended family headed by his mother, Virginia (Martha Plimpton), who wasn't all that great a child-raiser the first time around.

"This is a woman who can find 15 jokes in one-half a joke."
ACTRESS MARTHA PLIMPTON ON CLORIS LEACHMAN

"I hadn't been looking for a series regular gig. But I also wasn't not looking for one," says Plimpton, who has focused largely on the stage since a teen career that included the movies Goonies and Running on Empty.

"When I read it (Raising Hope), I just loved it. It actually made me laugh. And I thought this never happens, ever, so I better get on this."

Plimpton says the character of Virginia comes off as tough, but there's another side.

"She (Virginia) kind of doesn't take any crap. But at the same time she's got a really gooey, chewy, soft centre. She's a sucker for love."

Garcia says the jet-black humour of Raising Hope occasionally comes from real life. The pilot features an already notorious scene involving a baby and a loose car seat. "I've probably put the car seat in the car and driven somewhere and realized it wasn't strapped in and thought — well, this could have been awful. Or it could have been hilarious."

Tito to go solo on NYE

Tito Jackson, the 57-year-old musician and original member of the Jackson 5 says he will unveil some of his new material during a New Year's Eve performance in Atlanta.

He also plans to perform some Jackson 5 classics at the city's 22nd Annual Peach Drop celebration on Friday.

Jackson's debut solo album, So Far, So Good, will be released in early 2011. He says he had planned to release the album earlier, but after his brother Michael's death in 2009, "it took a minute to get my head back in the right direction." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Did Jackson kill himself?

A prosecutor says defence lawyers for Michael Jackson's doctor will claim at his involuntary manslaughter trial that the singer killed himself.

Dr. Conrad Murray is facing charges stemming from the death of Michael Jackson. A preliminary hearing starts on Jan. 4.

Jacksons fume over TV show

Discovery had planned to re-enact Michael's autopsy

Executors of Michael Jackson's estate demanded Wednesday that the Discovery Channel cancel plans for a show purporting to re-enact the dead superstar's autopsy.

John Branca and John McClain fired off an angry letter Wednesday to Discovery Communications calling the planned show "in shockingly bad taste" and insensitive to the feelings of Jackson's family.

They accused the company of being motivated by "blind desire to exploit Michael's death, while cynically attempting to dupe the public into believing this show will have serious medical value."

Branca and McClain said they were especially outraged by an Internet ad now circulating for the show, Michael Jackson's Autopsy.

They called it "sickening" and said it depicts a corpse on a steel gurney covered by a sheet with a hand sticking out wearing Michael's signature sequined glove.

"Discovery obviously views this as clever advertising...But in fact the ad makes light of Jackson's death and is debased, sick and insensitive," the letter said.

They said some viewing "this fictitious morbid image" on the Internet may think it is real. Discovery has had a reputation for fine TV programming which is why "we find your decision to proceed with an offensive, exploitative program like Michael Jackson's Autopsy so mind boggling," the lawyers said.

Branca and McClain appealed on behalf of Jackson's family, fans, common sense and decency for cancellation of the program.

A call to Discovery was not answered.

This fast-food favourite is easy on the wallet, watch and waistline

To keep the joy but battle the bulge, consider healthy homemade versions of sinful treats in the new year.

Savoury snacks sans the guilt

For too many of us, the holiday season isn't just about spreading glad tidings and joy. It's also about the spreading of the waistline.

Consider having a burger night where you serve pre-made veggie burgers rather than the fatty beef ones. There's quite a variety available in the freezer section of your grocer.

Don't forget that most fast-food burgers are all about the toppings, many of which can be quite healthy. Arrange a platter of tomatoes, pickles, onions, shredded lettuce and other toppings for your family to assemble their own burgers. And be sure to include some low-fat cheese and reduced-fat mayo, as well as ketchup and mustard.

While you're at it, why not use a nutrient-rich whole-grain bun instead of plain white?

If you prefer something crunchy, consider these fish nuggets with curried-mustard dipping sauce. They are made using an oven-frying technique that can give you results that are close to deep-fried, but with serious savings in fat and calories.

The first step is to coat fish chunks or fillets with a layer of buttermilk, mustard or even a low-fat creamy salad dressing. Then coat the pieces with seasoned breadcrumbs, crushed flake cereals or cornmeal. And if you're not in the mood for fish, the oven-frying technique works equally as well for chicken tenders or nuggets.

Crunchy fish nuggets with curried mustard sauce

Ingredients:

- 50 ml (1/4 cup) buttermilk
- 3 ml (3/4 tsp) salt, divided
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) ground black pepper, divided
- 625 g (1 1/4 lb) haddock or cod fillets, cut into pieces (2.5 cm/1 inch by 5 cm/2 inches)
- 250 ml (1 cup) panko (Japanese-style) breadcrumbs
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) chili powder
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) ground cumin
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) garlic powder
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) honey
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) coarse-grained mustard
- 10 ml (2 tsp) curry powder

Preparation:

1. Place a rack in the top third of the oven. Heat oven to 220 C (425 F). Set a wire rack on a baking sheet and coat it with cooking spray.
2. In a large bowl, whisk together buttermilk, 2 ml (1/2 tsp) of the salt and 1 ml (1/4 tsp) of the pepper. Add fish nuggets and turn to coat evenly.
3. In a shallow bowl or pie plate, combine panko, chili powder, cumin and garlic powder.
4. Dredge fish nuggets, 2 or 3 at a time, through breadcrumb mixture, coating all sides evenly. Arrange fish nuggets on prepared rack set over baking sheet. Coat evenly with cooking spray on all sides.
5. Bake for 10 to 12 minutes or until panko coating is golden brown and crisp and fish is opaque at the centre.
6. Meanwhile, in a small bowl, whisk together honey, mustard, curry powder, remaining 1 ml (1/4 tsp) salt and remaining 1 ml (1/4 tsp) pepper.
6. Serve fish nuggets with the curried mustard dipping sauce.

Have phone, will travel

▶ Smartphone apps can tell you where to get a haircut, a spa treatment, catch a movie or participate in a religious service wherever you may be in the world.

Thick, heavy travel books used to be among the things many people would lug around on vacation, along with a stack of printouts for reservations, and maybe some local maps to help navigate the area. And the directionally challenged might still get lost.

Now you can simply carry a smartphone, which replaces all that paper and runs interactive apps that are far more helpful than the old-fashioned travel aids. You can not only view a digital map of a city, but also see exactly where you are and what direction you're moving in. Other apps can pinpoint what restaurants or attractions are nearby and tap into the collective wisdom of the web to get good recommendations.

Here are a few examples of apps that are tremendously useful to travel with and make the most of your time away from home:

Before you leave, check your flight status. Air Canada has a free app that allows travellers to review flight information and check if theirs is on time. A variety of other free and paid apps also collect flight times from the web and display it on your smartphone.

Turn off data roaming and go Wi-Fi. Paying for data away from home is astronomically expensive, so the best bet is to turn off the option in your phone and become acclimated with where to pick up a free Wi-Fi signal. Check out the listings at jiwire.com/iphone or download the free app to find out where you might find one.

Same ol' travel guides just now a lot lighter. Most of the popular travel-book companies like Frommer's, Lonely Planet and DK Eyewitness Travel have jumped on the app bandwagon and are repurposing their advice for smartphones. And there's a lot to like about the digital versions. While the books might cost around $20, the apps are typically priced around $5 or $6. They're far easier to carry around and also have the potential to be updated with new information by the publisher. And the better ones are also interactive, and take full advantage of a smartphone's capabilities. Many apps will use the GPS to direct you to landmarks or restaurants, or tell you what's nearby and make recommendations based on your location.

Who better to ask than locals? Some still swear by the old guard of travel experts like Arthur or Pauline Frommer but many others are turning to locals online for advice about their favourite haunts and hometown experiences.

TripAdvisor and Yelp are just a couple of examples of websites that have ported their wealth of travel advice into apps.

Virtual vacation

Augmented reality is adding a whole new dimension to travel

- The technology takes a live video image on your smartphone and overlays local data, listings and other information on the screen.
- An iPhone app called New York Nearest Subway displays virtual arrows on your iPhone screen pointing the direction to the nearest subway stations and how far away they are.
- Google Goggles allows you to take a picture of a local landmark, or a piece of artwork in a museum, and Google will attempt to recognize it and give you more information about it.

Travelling without the tourist badge

It was with secret pleasure that I learned I could bounce around New York City recently — with knowledge of my surroundings — but still maintain the illusion that I knew what I was doing.

Indeed, the best part about the Fodor's New York City 2011 iPod travel app is that it's a secret. Fodor's trademark orange cover, a not-so-subtle hint to strangers that you are, indeed, a tourist, is delightfully absent when you pull up the same guide on your smart phone.

For me, that was the best part about having the application, compared to carting around the guidebook on recent jaunts throughout the city.

The content between the two was basically the same. While the application does have some tech extras that the book can't offer - such as using GPS to tell you what restaurants and sites are nearby - little else is different, beyond price and heft.

If I were entirely new to my destination, however, I'd think twice before committing solely to an app. Guidebooks are a joy to flip through; you get so many travel ideas, of places big and small, along with a sense of neighbourhoods.

When I have a trip ahead of me, I spend hours leafing through guidebooks, jotting down ideas, and examining my options.

▶ Sidney Crosby starts to celebrate after scoring the goal that won gold for Canada.

A hat trick for Sidney

Crosby named the Canadian Press male athlete of the year for the third time in four years ◐ National League MVP Joey Votto was runner-up

Sidney Crosby's entire year was defined by a split second at the end of February.

In the time it took the superstar forward to deftly corral Jarome Iginla's pass and beat Ryan Miller between the legs, Crosby put an exclamation mark on the Vancouver Olympics and secured a spot in Canadian hockey lore. Not only did his overtime goal against the Americans clinch the men's hockey gold medal for Canada, it sent the entire country into a jubilant frenzy on the final day of the Games.

And all in the blink of an eye.

The golden goal had such an impact that it has earned Crosby the Lionel Conacher Award as the Canadian Press male athlete of the year for the third time in four years.

He previously topped the annual poll of the country's newsrooms after significant achievements that were months in the making — winning the Hart Trophy as NHL MVP in 2007 and leading the Pittsburgh Penguins to the Stanley Cup in 2009. His third award comes in recognition of a magical moment where he seized a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

"That's the big thing that sticks out to me," Crosby said in an interview.

"Obviously, that goal and the Olympic Games themselves. That was a pretty unique experience. To have it in Canada and to play hockey and represent your country in a sport that everybody is so passionate about, it was pretty special."

SCOTT RUSSELL
FIELD OF PLAY

RESOLUTIONS FOR CANADIAN SPORT

What to resolve for 2011? How about that the Canadian hockey juniors reclaim the world championship? That's a given.

Or that a Canadian-based NHL team should, for the first time since the Montreal Canadiens of 1993, win the Stanley Cup? Now that would be sweet. But, beyond the ice, there are other pursuits that might warrant concerted effort and attention as the calendar flips to a brand new year and the onset of sporting seasons yet to be admired.

Maybe Canadian fans should consider resolutely backing the female national soccer squad. Indications are this team can make an impact at the 2011 FIFA Women's World Cup in Germany, and in the process ignite tremendous support for the sport back home.

Considering the number of people in this country who play and love the game, success by the women on the world stage could make Canada a future host of major tournaments. That kind of breakthrough could also spark rededicated efforts to improve the men's national program, with a view to getting Canada qualified for the FIFA World Cup Brazil in 2014.

As far as high performance in amateur sport goes, Canadians should resolve to maintain the momentum established at the Olympics in Vancouver and Whistler. The summer Games in London are now less than two years away, and an array of maple-leaf stars deserve to be in the spotlight as they gear up for the pre-Olympic season.

They include Brent Hayden and Ryan Cochrane, two of the best swimmers in the world. To name but a few more, there's also diving's Alexandre Despatie, triathlon's Paula Findlay and hurdler Priscilla Lopes-Schliep. All are worthy of generous and consistent support.

In 2011 Canada should also be resolved to become less a spectator nation and more an active one. There are too few tracks and swimming pools in this country. Too many schools lack gymnasiums and make health education an optional proposition.

Our national physical literacy and sense of well-being ought to go far beyond tuning in the TV set to check in on the exploits of our favourite hockey or football team. As a nation we must broaden our horizons of sporting interest so as to include role models from a richer variety of athletic endeavours.

In short, a happy new year, when it comes to Canadian sport, might hinge on a national resolution to consider a wider field of play.

Happy Birthday Superman! If u r reading this, my msg made it! Wishing u a very special bday today. U hold a special place in my heart. And in the end, it's not the years in your life that count. It's the life in your years — and u have added great years to mine! Here's to your bday — XO's nacho libre styles :) Heart you cc

CT my sweetheart,
You opened my heart and taught me how to love.
You remind me to breathe.
You make me feel safe.
I love you way too much Baby! I know this is cheesy
But I took my Lactaid. Happy 10-12 (aka life sentence) MWAH!!!!!
~ forever yours

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 You must cooperate with friends and co-workers because it's the only way you are going to get anything worthwhile done. You don't have to give up your own ideas but you do have to listen to other people's occasionally.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 If you are not yet moving at top speed you soon will be. This is one of the most dynamic times of the year, so show the world what you can do!

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 There may be some temper tantrums on the home front over the next few days but it's no big deal really so don't be alarmed. The important thing is that you leave the door open for reconciliation. Life is not war.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 If you have something important to say now is the time to make yourself heard. Not everyone will appreciate your forthright attitude but that won't worry you one little bit.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 Cosmic activity in the wellbeing area of your chart urges you to slow down a bit — but only a bit. Also, don't be impulsive with your cash. Money may not be so easy to come by over the next few weeks.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 No matter how much you like peace and quiet you will make a big noise today and over the weekend. The Sun in Capricorn means it's time to come out of your shell.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 You may be slowing down a bit physically after the excesses of the last few days but that does not mean you are mentally inactive. On the contrary, your mind is seething with brilliant ideas.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 Do what you want to do rather than what other people say you should do. Only you know what it is you want most out of life so only you can decide which path to take. Make it the path that brings you most joy.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Keep telling yourself there is nothing you cannot do. The more you repeat it the more your subconscious will believe it is true, then all sorts of wonderful things will start to happen.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 With not only the Sun but also Mars and Pluto transiting your sign, you are determined that 2011 will be the year when all your dreams come true. You've had your fill of being an also-ran.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 You must get tough with someone who has not been playing straight in recent weeks. It's better to force a showdown now than let negative feelings linger into the new year. Patch things up or go your separate ways.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Will 2011 be a time of great achievement or will it be a time of unending conflict? The answer to that question is entirely in your own hands. You must forgive, forget and move on. SALLY BROMPTON
